

SLEEPING GIRL WALKS OFF TRAIN

Awaking Alone at Night in Prairie, Flays Freight
With Skirt.

RAVANNA, NEB., July 10.—Miss Lois Campbell, sixteen years old, favorite daughter of James Campbell, vice-president of the Frisco Railroad system, is a heroine. When walking in her sleep she fell from an eastbound Burlington passenger train, which was going at a forty-mile clip, early yesterday. She not only lived through the frightful plunge, but escaped practically without injury. When she regained consciousness she promptly removed one of her slippers. With it she flagged a freight train. It carried her to Sweet Water. When she left the freight she saw her father, who was distracted by grief, standing on the platform.

Demoralized Service.
The first intimation he had of her escape from death or injury was when he felt her arms about his neck and her kisses upon his cheek. When the news was flashed along the Burlington line that the missing girl had been found, it relieved a trying situation. For hours all the trains on the railroad had been going at slow speed looking for Miss Campbell. The engineers had been charged particularly to hold their locomotives in hand at all times so they might stop in time to save her life if she should be lying injured or unconscious on the tracks. That demoralized the entire schedule, and it was several hours after the plucky and fortunate girl had been restored to her father before the service could be restored to its normal condition.

Miss Campbell was accompanying her father on one of his Eastern trips. They went to their berths early, and both soon were fast asleep. The train was on the prairie west of Ravanna, when Miss Campbell, presumably in a fit of somnambulism, left her berth, made her way to the end of the car and walked off. She struck the prairie beside tracks with such force that she was made unconscious.

Alone on the Prairie.
When she regained consciousness she was at a loss to account for her position. At first she looked about for the train, thinking there had been a wreck. It was not within sight, and she was alone at night in the prairie, miles from any station. Fortunately for her she was partly dressed. The cool air soon revived her, and she staggered to her feet. She was overjoyed to find that she had escaped with a few scratches and bruises.

Miss Campbell decided she must not wait for help to come to her, but must go and look for it. Therefore she started walking down the track. In a few minutes she saw far down the line the lights of an approaching train, and prepared to signal it.

When the train was only a few hundred feet away she stood as near to the track as she dared and began waving her skirt. Her position placed her within range of the headlight, and the engineer of the train promptly slapped on his brakes and brought the train to a stop.

When he had heard the girl's story and ascertained who she was he took her aboard the train and made her as comfortable as he could. He told the girl he would let her off at Sweet Water and place her in the care of the agent, who would telegraph to her father.

Special Sent Back.
It was not until the train to which Campbell's private car was attached had reached Ravanna that the girl was missed. The railroad president immediately directed that a special train be made up and sent back along the line to look for her. What he feared was that she had been killed by the fall or was lying on the tracks, where she would be killed by a passing train. In a few minutes the special, with Campbell and other railroad men on board, was making its way slowly westward. Just before starting Campbell directed the train dispatchers to send a warning to all train crews to run slowly and watch for the girl.

The Campbell special reached Sweet Water a few minutes ahead of the freight train from the opposite direction. The girl's father was almost prostrated with grief, and was standing on the platform, disconsolately when the freight pulled in and his daughter leaped off the engine and threw herself into his arms.

WALKS ON HIGH COPING
Woman Somnambulant Is Rescued From Danger by Policeman.
NEW YORK, July 10.—Sleeping soundly, Mrs. Katherine J. Souther, twenty-eight years old, gave a remarkable performance on window copings of No. 107 Main Street, Yonkers, last night that attracted a crowd and brought out a fire truck. The woman lives in Yonkers, N. Y., where her brother-in-law owns a theatre, and she was spending a few days with another relative, George F. Wakenfield, in Yonkers.

She retired at 9:45 o'clock, and half an hour later she got out of bed, climbed out the window on the third story, footed her way carefully along a stone coping, stepped across to another window and stood balancing herself easily without clinging to the wall.

The feat would have been impossible for an acrobat, with all his senses alert. This sleeping woman did it easily. She seemed about to lose her footing any minute, and those in the street, aware of the situation, made no sound to startle the somnambulant to her senses.

Patrolman Downey ran into the house and was permitted to go to Mrs. Souther's room when he explained the situation. Leaning out the window he seized the woman's wrist and she awoke in a daze. Downey was unable to hold her, and she would have fallen to the street but for the guy wire of an electric sign which she grasped.

An excited citizen turned in an alarm of fire and the crew of the truck that responded took the young woman down from her dangerous perch. She was screaming hysterically and was removed to St. Joseph's Hospital. The Wakenfields said they never had heard that Mrs. Souther walked in her sleep or they would have taken precautions against her climbing out a window.

has, during the present generation, come to be known as the "National Disease" of America. So prevalent has it become that it is almost an exception to find a person without it. It is usually found associated with nervous dyspepsia, which is often the most prominent symptom. In this age of hurry, worry, hustle and the strenuous life in business, many people overwork their nervous systems, and put too much strain upon them, which eventually causes a partial or total breakdown. Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey, through its tonic and rebuilding constituents, will cure these troublesome nervous complaints by supplying the system with those vital elements which it needs to bring about a complete restoration to health.

The processes of tearing down and building up are constantly being carried on in the body, and if nothing interferes with these important processes health results; but when something occurs to check them, disease is sure to follow. Duffy's Malt Whiskey overcomes the disease by stimulating the heart and nerves, which quickens the circulation of blood, enabling the system to properly assimilate the food from the alimentary tract; also, to adequately eliminate from the system through the lungs, pores, kidneys and intestines, those waste products, such as uric acid, toxins, etc., which result from the disintegration of the old tissues of the body, and the decomposition of albumen in the alimentary canal.

If you wish to keep young, strong and vigorous, and have on your cheeks the glow of perfect health, take Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey regularly, according to directions. It tones and strengthens the heart action and purifies the entire system. It is recognized as a family medicine everywhere.

If weak and run down, take a teaspoonful four times a day in half a glass of milk or water.

Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey is sold everywhere by druggists, grocers and dealers, or shipped on order for $1.00 a bottle.

Our Consulting Physician will send to every reader of The Times-Dispatch advice and an interesting illustrated medical booklet free of charge. The Duffy Malt Whiskey Company, Rochester, N. Y.

STRANGE BOAT LAUNCHED

Model of Robert Fulton's Steamer Takes Its First Plunge.

NEW YORK, July 10.—Sliding down the ways as gracefully as any big modern ocean liner ever took the water, the strange looking little craft, which is a model of Robert Fulton's Hudson river steamboat Clermont, was launched today under the auspices of the Hudson-Fulton celebration commission at the yards of the Staten Island Shipbuilding Company.

Next fall, during the Hudson-Fulton celebration, the Clermont will be the central figure in a great flotilla of warships of all nations, which will accompany her over the same course on the Hudson from New York to Albany which Fulton took in the original on Aug. 18, 1807, amid the derision of the multitudes who lined the shores and waggishly called the inventor crazy.

General Stewart L. Woodford, president of Hudson-Fulton commission, presided, and Mrs. Alice Gray Sutcliffe, a great-granddaughter of Fulton, named the "first steamboat" as it slid into the water.

Mrs. Sutcliffe broke on the bow a beautiful silver Altarglass vase filled with water from the well on the old Livingston place, at Clermont, where Fulton made the first stop on the maiden trip of the Clermont.

WIVES IN UPROAR

Court's Ruling May Render Many Recent Marriages Illegal.

CHICAGO, July 10.—Weeping wives and frightened husbands besieged the office of Marriage License Clerk Salmonson, in the county building, yesterday in a vain effort to learn whether or not they were legally married, or whether, according to a recent decision of the Illinois supreme court, they had been united by justices of the peace who had no authority.

Many of the women carried babies, while others led small children.

All of them had read of Judge Bell's ruling, that marriage ceremonies performed by justices of the peace in Chicago since the inauguration of the municipal court were contrary to the law, and, therefore, null and void.

Judge Foster, who is acting chief justice of the municipal court, declared the law was plain and that undoubtedly every marriage performed by justices of the peace since the municipal court law went into effect was illegal.

If the decision is affirmed, a special act of the Illinois legislature may be sought that will legalize all the marriages.

BOY SHOTS FATHER IN FUN

Plays With Gun and Accidentally Pulls Trigger.

LANCASTER, PA., July 10.—Arthur Yeager, of Philadelphia, was accidentally shot in the head yesterday by his twelve-year-old son at Witmer, where they were visiting Mr. Yeager's father. The boy got hold of a breech-loading shotgun, slipped a cartridge into it and then, in a spirit of fun, aimed it at his father. How he came to pull the trigger he cannot explain.

Mr. Yeager was taken to the General Hospital. His wound is serious, but not necessarily fatal.

SAT ON BURGLAR

Woman's Capture Prevented Loofing of Her Own Home.

NEW YORK, July 10.—Mrs. Elizabeth Reilly, a large and athletic woman, living at 5 Spencer Court, in a fashionable section of Brooklyn, heard a noise in the basement of her home at 4 o'clock yesterday morning. She promptly slipped into a kimono, went down stairs, discovered a burglar, knocked him down and sat on him until help arrived.

In a dress-suit case the intruder dropped when he went down under the weight of Mrs. Reilly, the police found valuable silverware and linen belonging to the feminine captor.
